WORKOUT 2

Girl's Trip

Read the story and circle any words that have female names embedded in them.

One day, several months back, Gram and I were sitting on the front porch when we spied an angelic looking monarch loitering above the rosebush on the side of the house. As we watched it flitter about, Gram asked me how I was doing in school. This was her favorite topic for two reasons. As a retired teacher, she valued education and English in particular. My school was also her alma mater, so she really enjoyed hearing about the events and happenings at good old Cardinal High. As usual, she never missed an opportunity to tell me that in her day she was not allowed to wear jeans or faded patchwork blouses like the apparel I was donning. I laughingly told her that she is a bit jaded and only wishes she could have dressed in such comfortable clothes. In the course of our banter, I informed Gram that I was recently named class valedictorian. She was so thrilled to hear I was top in my class. She said, “we must celebrate with a trip of a lifetime.”

I was overjoyed to learn that my Grandma was taking me on a vacation to see “America,” as she called it. Her idea of seeing America meant that we would leave Cleveland and head east to Nantucket for a week, and then west to California. Even though my dream travel path would also include seeing the floral beauty of Hawaii, the dawning of a beautiful sunrise in North Carolina, and an adventurous trip through the Everglades, I cherished any chance I could get to evacuate myself from this annoying town. Gram picked these locations because she wanted to make her annual visit to her sister’s house on the Cape first, and then head west to California to watch for celebrity sightings. She was ruthless in her pursuit of scoping out the famous and their ever-faithful fans.

So farewell friends! We are headed for the closest cabana! I’m sorry you are not privy to be part of our travel plans.
